English Punctuation and Grammar

Using Apostrophes to Show Possession

As well as being used in contractions, apostrophes are also used to show possession/ownership - that something belongs to someone. However, where we put the apostrophe depends on the noun to which it is However, where we put the apostrophe depends on the noun to which it is being attached.

For an owner (one person, group or object) that does not end with an 's', an apostrophe, followed by an 's', is added to the end of the word.

Noun + 9 + 8

E.g. I would like to borrow Mark's book. I would like to borrow the children's book.

For any owner (singular or plural) that ends with an 's', an apostrophe is simply added to the end of the word.

Noun + 9

E.g. I would like to borrow Jess' skateboard. I would like to borrow the girls' skateboard.

For an instance when we have two nouns as the owners we attach the apostrophe and the 's' to the end of the last noun.

NounA and NounB + * + s

E.g. I would like to visit Jess and Mark's house.

In your English book, rewrite these sentences using apostrophes to show that the underlined subject (i.e. person) owns the object that is shown in italics.

E.g. The dogs collar is on the shelf. -> The dog's collar is on the shelf.

- 1. Michelles sandwich tastes better than mine.
- 2. I think I like Andreas painting best.
- 3. Michael and Sams performance was very interesting and entertaining.
- 4. I want mine to look like less jeans.
- 5. Ms Davisons classes are always fun!
- 6. Chris tricks are the best!
- 7. The boys role play was funnier than the girls'.
- 8. James schoolwork is always neatly written.
- 9. Mr Harney and Mr Lands joke during assembly was hilarious!
- 10. Jacks cartwheels make me feel like learning to do some myself!